

As technology advances for the end user consumer, the FCC and government should not prevent the consumer from using the technology in a legal way. The VCR is used by millions to tape television shows unrestricted. New formats, like DVD and DVRs, provide the consumer more options, better quality and longer lasting recordings.

Assuming that a consumer will use new technology illegally and pre-emptively limiting our rights is unconstitutional and just plain STUPID.